Only 1 in 6 youth who receive free and reduced meals at school take advantage of free meal programs during the summer.\(^1\) The result? Kids are hungry, and meals are left uneaten.

Government agencies, schools, nonprofits, and community members are working hard to promote the programs that feed youth during the summer. Range is part of that effort.

RANGE IS A MOBILE APP THAT LOCATES THE TIME AND PLACE WHERE FREE MEALS ARE SERVED.

Anyone can use this app to find free meals for youth this summer, but we’re focusing outreach on trusted adults who interact with youth—physicians, librarians, social workers, public parks counselors—to increase visibility to the neighborhood sites that provide this crucial service. Data from WhyHunger.org, a database of federal and grassroots nutrition programs, powers Range to locate reliable sources of healthy and free meals.

We believe putting this app in the hands of many will increase the numbers of youth who are fed. Range won't solve hunger, but it might help a child find his or her next meal. Learn more about the service and share your expertise and commitment to this issue. www.RangeApp.org

---

Use Range to locate and share information about summer meals sites.

- Easy-to-use maps display the nearest sites and directions for getting there
- Clear indication if the site is open or closed
- Share information via text or email
- Learn about services offered at the site

---

---

\(^1\)"Ask USDA" webinar (March 20, 2014).